CIHUATÁN CINABRIO

Cihuatán Cinabrio is a rum crafted as an homage to Kinich Ahau, Mayan god of the sun. Legend has it that the Sleeping Woman, guardian goddess of the Cihuatán valley, would intercede on behalf of the people of Cihuatán so that Kinich Ahau would energize the valley with his two hummingbirds. The name “Cinabrio” was inspired by the color red, which was crafted by the ancient Maya using the mineral Cinabrio (cinnabar). Red was Kinich Ahau’s sacred color and regarded as a good omen.

The rum is aged in ex-Bourbon American white oak barrels.
